

Jet Works Air Center Exhibited At Shanghai International Business Aviation Show

APRIL 15, 2011, SHANGHAI, CHINA.....Jet Works Air Center exhibited at the first ever Shanghai International Business Aviation Show (SIBAS) held April 13-15 at the Shanghai Hongqiao International Airport. The event was hosted by the Chinese Ministry of Science and Technology, Shanghai Association for Science & Technology and Society of Aeronautics.

Jet Works displayed their technical capabilities for completions of green aircraft, airliner conversions and extensive refurbishment and upgrades for Private and Corporate Aircraft ranging from Boeing and Airbus to Challenger and Piaggio. In addition, Jet Works has the capabilities to concurrently accomplish heavy maintenance inspections for Boeings and other aircraft during the downtime for completion and/or refurbishment at the same facilities. Jet Works highlighted four Boeing BBJ interior refurbishment assignments in the last year and currently has an MD-87 in hangar for a complete conversion of the aircraft into a Private Saudi owned twenty-four passenger interior.

Marc Johnson, Director of Sales VIP Completions represented Jet Works and was joined by a member of the ownership- Phil Jordan, acting Senior Marketing Executive for Jet Works.

Johnson noted that they had quite a number of productive conversations and were already in preliminary discussions with multi-aircraft operators to provide heavy and recurrent maintenance solutions as well as complete interior refurbishment and avionics upgrades.
